Classrooms will be open from 8:30am, breakfast served from 8:45am and we will welcome Gys Seegers, who will take our special outdoor Father's Day chapel.

Please ensure you visit the front office to sign your child out before leaving.

Chaplains Book Shelf

by Pr Amy Turner

One of Pr Amy's favourite hobbies is to read! In the 'Chaplains Book Shelf', Pr Amy shares her thoughts and 'take-homes' of books she has enjoyed and found helpful.

Habits of the Household

Author: Justin Whitmel Earley

This book is an excellent read for parents of kids of any age looking for a really practical way to incorporate spiritual rhythms and routines into the busyness of family life. The author, Justin Whitmel Earley, who is in the trenches himself, fathering 4 energetic boys; does not sugar coat the craziness of family life, yet beautifully calls families to re-evaluate how the ordinary, mundane routines of life are opportunities to parent with intentionality and point our kids to Jesus.

The book is divided into 10 sections, each looking at a core element of the household and how these can be transformed as habits that can change families from the inside out. The 10 chapters include: Waking, Mealtimes, Discipline, Screen time, Family Devotions, Marriage, Work, Play, Conversation and Bedtime.

Each topic has key practical ideas that you can adopt and adapt into your family routines. I cannot share ideas from all 10 sections, but these were my top 3 ideas that I want to see develop in my own home.

1. Mealtimes. While I intrinsically believed there was value in families coming together around the table for meals, I loved the evidence shared in this book on the importance of mealtimes together. One study by the Barna Group on Christian households found that families who were 'spiritually vibrant' shared one thing in common – they ate together and had 'loud tables'. One of the key reasons for this is the conversations that occur around the table and in turn the relationships that are built. The author suggested trying some games around the table like 'pass the pepper' – where a question is asked and the person with the pepper answers the questions as it is passed around. Share your day, connect with your kids and watch as relationships grow.

2. Family Devotions. This is a hard one! I personally try to have a family devotional time with my kids before we head out the door for school – but as many of you may find getting out the door for school can be a little crazy! The author shared how while devotional time is good, it's also important to have spiritual conversations with your kids all through the day so that they see that life with Jesus is about 'all day every day', not just specific times. Some ideas of combined devotional time however include looking for times when you are already gathered – like in the car, or around the table.

3. Conversations. Like mentioned, conversation is so important in spiritually rich households. In the fast paced, noisy lives we live, the stillness for meaningful conversations can however be hard to find. Are there times that you need to turn your phone and notifications off so you can be present with your kids? Make the most of car trips, go for family walks, chat while doing chores, take your child out for some one-on-one time – are some ideas to find ways to connect. Conversation is the "learnt art of friendship in your household."

I loved how practical and easy to apply this book was! My desire for my household and yours, is that we can create space for our kids to understand and experience the love of God.
