

THE TEACHER AND THE 'B' GRADE CLASS

Several years ago as she started the school year, a second-grade teacher, Frances Hurst, was told that she had the "middle" class of students. At that time, all the students were grouped in either "low," "middle" or "high." This grouping or grading bothered Ms Hurst quite a bit because she had never taught "ability grouping" before.

On her first day of class, the students told her they were the "middle group," and at that point Ms Hurst went into action. She closed the door, placed paper over the glass in the windows and told the students there had been a mistake and that they were actually the "high" group. From that point on, she treated them like they were the high group. Her expectations for them were high; their own expectations and confidence grew and at the end of the school year the SRA test (which is given to measure the achievement for each group) revealed that her group had tested one year ahead of the "high" group. Since this test was a class average, that meant that some of the students were testing much higher than the "high" group.

Someone once said that if you treat a person as he is you make him worse than he was, but if you treat that person as the individual he's capable of becoming you make him the best person possible. That's a marvellous philosophy because it's true. This was aptly proven by Ms Frances Hurst. Wouldn't it be wonderful if every parent, teacher, employer, etc., would treat everybody as if they were in the "high group"? Odds are dramatic that everything would be better. You can't influence everybody, but you can influence those you work and live with. Put them all in the high group - they'll climb higher and so will you. See you at the top!

CHAPLAIN'S NEWS

Nothing grabs our imagination like an inspirational story. You know what I mean...that, never give up; you can do it; it was the most surprising thing. What if we could see that in our everyday jobs? Would it make a difference? It is hard to believe how far each year has progressed, achieved and how much fun they have had doing it. I guarantee though if you ask, 'How was your day today?' most of them will say, 'It was OK, its just school!' I also realise that many students still look at school as a struggle but sometimes it takes someone special in their lives to share with them how good school really is! When was the last time you were stuck on a really difficult problem, then the bell goes and you can just leave it? Then you get out your wonderful recess snack/ meal and then just play for a while? Your feet in cool sand, to play some soccer, to sit in the shade and just read a book without a care in the world. Would you like to swap?

Inspirational things happen on a daily basis here at Carmel. I am so proud of our children as they help each other, achieve great results, jokes told and laughter shared. Sure we get a few hiccups but school really is an amazing place. It grabs my imagination at what Carmel students might become in the future with the possibilities that are offered through Education here at Carmel.

Mums Raising Boys – up to the age of 12 –Wednesday 4th November at Lotteries House, Joondalup.

However well-prepared mothers are logically, the emotional response to having a boy is often still, 'Wow! This is unknown territory.' It is true that for many mothers, the idea of raising a son carries its own set of worries. As the primary female role model in a boy's life, mothers play an important role in the development of their son's identity including their ability to be nurturing. This in turn affects how they relate to others, particularly to girls and women. For further information and to enrol please phone 6164 0200.
