The Monkey and the Wooden Apples...

There once was a happy monkey wandering the jungle, eating delicious fruit when hungry, and resting when tired. One day he came upon a house, where he saw a bowl of the most beautiful apples. He took one in each hand and ran back into the forest.

He sniffed the apples and smelled nothing. He tried to eat them, but hurt his teeth. They were made of wood, but they were beautiful, and when the other monkeys saw them, he held onto them even tighter.

He admired his new possessions proudly as he wandered the jungle. They glistened red in the sun, and seemed perfect to him. He became so attached to them, that he didn't even notice his hunger at first.

A fruit tree reminded him, but he felt the apples in his hands. He couldn't bear to set them down to reach for the fruit. In fact, he couldn't relax, either, if he was to defend his apples. A proud, but less happy monkey continued to walk along the forest trails.

The apples became heavier, and the poor little monkey thought about leaving them behind. He was tired, hungry, and he couldn't climb trees or collect fruit with his hands full. What if he just let go?

Letting go of such valuable things seemed crazy, but what else could he do? He was so tired. Seeing the next fruit tree, and smelling its fruit was enough. He dropped the wooden apples and reached up for his meal. He was happy again.

Like that little monkey, we sometimes carry things that seem too valuable to let go. A person may carry an image of himself as "productive" - carry it like a shiny wooden apple. But in reality, his busyness leaves him tired, and hungry for a better life.

Still, letting go seems crazy. Even his worries are sacred apples - they prove he's "doing everything he can." He holds onto them compulsively. Do you have 'wooden apples' that you're holding on to?

From our Chaplain...

Last Tuesday, our Year 5 students enjoyed an excursion to Tranby House (Peninsular Farm) as part of their learning for History. Looking amazing in old-fashioned costumes, a great day of learning was experienced by everyone.

I do enjoy this excursion as each year I am reminded what a hard life it must have been for our early pioneers and how incredibly blessed we are with all our modern conveniences! Joseph and Ann Hardey arrived in Perth in 1830. Joseph was not only an experienced farmer, but both he and his wife believed in God and were very active in sharing their faith with others in the new colony. They were also known for helping the sick and those in need. With no church building, they would hold church services in their home with Joseph being the preacher. They waited until June 1840, for the Swan River Colony to have their first minister.

Hearing the stories and walking through the rooms, I couldn't help but reflect how God had a calling for Joseph and Ann Hardey and how they were faithful to Him through the good times and also some really difficult times. I know that today, God still has a calling for each one of us and He promises to walk right beside us and do life with us. How encouraging to be reminded of that!

Isaiah 40:31 But they who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings like eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint.

God bless,
Nicola Warchol
